

EUROPEAN POWERS CLASH ON AL KASS DAY THREE

The third day of the 2018 AI Kass International Cup featured dazzling skill, heartbreak and nail-biting football as the world's top Under-17 teams continued to do battle at Aspire Zone. The knockout round, which commences tomorrow, began to take shape, with Real Madrid securing the top of Group B and Aspire Football Dreams also punching their ticket to the next stage.

A physical opening match pitted AC Milan against AC Wydad, who were looking to recover from a loss in their opening match. The Italians opened aggressively, with a series of near-misses turned away by both the woodwork and Wydad keeper Taha Mourid. The game went into halftime scoreless, with momentum clearly with Milan.

Milan's Riccardo Tonin had a golden chance to break the deadlock early in the second half when he stepped to the spot for a penalty. But Mourid expertly blocked his shot, and the rebound went wide. Alas, the Moroccan keeper's one lapse would prove costly. In the 78th minute, he let a straightforward shot slip through his grasp, giving Niccolo' Corti a gift goal—an unfortunate coda to a remarkable game from Mourid.

In the second match, Real Madrid and Aspire Football Dreams were both all but assured of qualification, and used the opportunity to tune up for the later stages. Real Madrid sent out an almost entirely new lineup, and the fresh legs paid off in the 23rd minute, when new face Eneko Gines sent in a free kick that Javier Domniguez hammered home.

Aspire Football Dreams levelled just before halftime, however, as Christian Otabil advanced into the area down the left side and evaded Real keeper Toni Ribera for his second goal of the tournament.

The second half saw a continuation of the competitive play, with both sides pushing for the advantage. An offside call negated an Aspire goal at the one-hour mark, and the pace slowed in the game's final stages.

Tuesday evening concluded with a cross-Channel rivalry match between England's Tottenham Hotspur and France's Paris Saint-Germain. PSG put themselves in an early hole with a careless giveaway leading to a Enock Asante goal, and nearly gifted Asante a second moments later. But PSG settled and levelled on a rocket off the foot of Adil Aouchiche. Alexandre Fressange finished on a cross in the 28th minute, giving PSG the lead.

The Spurs, playing their second game in two days, were clearly tired, but Dilan Markanday set up Asante for his second goal of the game early in the second half to equalise. The English joy was short-lived, though, as Fressange fired his second of the game from close range two minutes later. On 76 minutes, Loic Soh added an insurance goal for the French, sending Tottenham out of the tournament.

In today's final day of the group stage, AC Milan and Espérance play at 3:30 pm, followed by Benfica and Aspire Academy at 5:35 pm. Kashiwa Reysol and PSG close out the evening in a battle for the top of Group D at 7:40 pm.

BIG NAMES BRING FANS TO AL KASS

AS THE 2018 AL KASS INTERNATIONAL CUP SETTLED INTO ITS FAMILIAR ANNUAL RHYTHM ON MATCH DAY THREE, FANS FROM ACROSS DOHA GATHERED AT ASPIRE ZONE FOR ANOTHER NIGHT OF TOP-CLASS UNDERI7-FOOTBALL.

As the 2018 Al Kass International Cup settled into its familiar annual rhythm on Match Day Three, fans from across Doha gathered at Aspire Zone for another night of top-class Under-17 football.

Al Kass is known for attracting some of the world's top clubs, and last night was no exception, as European giants Real Madrid, Tottenham Hotspur, Paris Saint-Germain and AC Milan all took the pitch.

It was the Italian side that drew fan Michele Muccilli to Aspire.
"I'm new to Qatar, and as soon as I found out about Al Kass, I knew I would be attending, especially since my team, AC Milan, is playing," he said after Milan's 1-0 win over Wydad AC.
"I think that this tournament is important because it gives young players a chance to play against many international teams, giving them great experience for their careers."

Defending tournament champions Real Madrid opened the tournament with a resounding 6-2 win over Fenerbahçe, but had a tougher go of it yesterday against Aspire Football Dreams.

Mark Edwards, attending his third straight AI Kass tournament, was enthusiastic about his club, saying, "I lived in Spain for a long time, and that's why I support Real Madrid. I think they stand a good chance of securing the title for a second year running."

PSG LEGEND SPEAKS

Luis Fernández, who spent the bulk of a 15-year professional football career with Paris Saint-Germain, was at Al Kass yesterday to watch his old club take on Tottenham Hotspur. Fernández, who started with PSG at age 19, said tournaments such as Al Kass are critical for youth football development.

"I'm happy that these young players to have the opportunity to be faced with different cultures and in another country," he said. "I think there are some promising young players who have potential, but they are still young, and the Al Kass tournament presents an opportunity to demonstrate their quality and their talent."

Quote of The Day

"So far, we've had a fantastic experience at Al Kass. Three years ago, I was here for A Kass, so I know expectations are high, and I warned the team of this so they would be prepared. Being here is a great opportunity for them to grow as football players."

Simone Baldo, Coach, AC Milan

TOP PLAYERS OF MATCH DAY ONE

AC Milan secured a narrow one-goal victory over Wydad, despite dominating the match from start to finish. The Moroccans had goalkeeper Taha Mourid to thank for keeping the scoreline respectable, although it was his error that allowed the Italians to prevail, after he had conjured a series of world-class saves.

Milan's players would have been aware of their club's proud history at Al Kass, and of how progress from U-17 level to first team is possible. Striker Patrick Cutrone was one of the star players of Al Kass 2014, when Milan finished third. He is now lighting up Serie A, having come through the Rossoneri's ranks. Cutrone's career trajectory provides an inspiration to the Al Kass Class of 2018, and proof that talent, dedication and application can eventually bring success.

Wydad had come off second best in a highly physical encounter against Esperance Tunis on Sunday evening, but this time round they were given more time on the ball to settle.

While Wydad tended to sit deep, Milan adopted an adventurous approach, with three attackers supported by two advanced midfielders when in possession. The best of the early chances fell to Milan skipper Riccardo Tonin on 13 minutes, who rose unmarked to glance a header wide of the left-hand post.

Then, a moment of brilliance from Daniel Maldini almost led to the opener, when his free kick from 25 yards looked to be flying into the top right corner, only to be expertly tipped over by Mourid.

However, the Wydad stopper was a mere spectator when, around the half-hour mark, Sianka Haidara smashed a volley onto the woodwork from just inside the area.

Soon after, a marauding run from Giacomo Olzer was brought to an abrupt halt by a wild challenge from Wydad captain Mhammed Rabii, who was booked. Olzer took the free kick himself, and forced another impressive save from Mourid, low to his right.

Milan were now firmly on top, controlling possession and crafting all the chances. It seemed only a matter of time before they turned their dominance into goals.

With 10 minutes of the half remaining, Maldini should have scored after he latched onto Riccardo Bruni's low cross from the right, but he somehow contrived to miscue his effort from a few yards out.

In the absence of goals, the game became increasingly physical, with wild challenges flying in and tempers fraying. Referee Ahmed Hussain did well to keep things flowing, when the temptation must have been to reach for his cards.

The second period got underway with Milan reasserting their dominance, creating and wasting many chances. The best of these arrived on 52 minutes, when Tonin teed up Olzer – by now, his team's standout performer – who fired just over from the edge of the area.

Moments later, their best chance of the game arrived when the referee awarded a penalty to Milan. Tonin stepped up and shot well, but Mourid produced an outstanding save, and Haidara sliced the rebound horribly wide.

A nasty collision on the hour mark between Wydad's Aziz Mouncef and Milan keeper Leonardo Uzzo, as they competed to get on the end of a high ball, saw both players require treatment. The unfortunate Uzzo was forced from the field, to be replaced by Niccolo Zanellato.

By now, Wydad were beginning to display some attacking intent – albeit with little end product – as Milan's frustration grew. It was now the Italians' turn to sit deep as Tonin and Olzer became more isolated up front. Head Coach Simone Baldo introduced some fresh legs, with Alberto Barazzetta and Edoardo Brusa replacing Maldini and Andrea Porrini. Re-energised, Milan once again laid siege to the Wydad goal, with wave upon wave of attacks repelled by the Moroccan backline.

The Italians had wasted so many chances that it was surprising when they finally went ahead in the 78th minute. Mourid somehow let a straightforward shot squirm under his body, leaving Niccolo Corti with the simplest of finishes. In truth, it was no more than the Rossoneri deserved, although it was desperately unfortunate for Wydad's keeper, who had easily been their man of the match up to that point.

Despite facing imminent elimination, Wydad maintained their conservative formation, reluctant to commit players forward in search of a precious equaliser. Ultimately, they paid the price, as Milan saw the remaining minutes out with a minimum of fuss.

It was bright and sunny when the Italian team came against the Moroccans on the field today.

The wind had switched directions — opposite to the direction it had been blowing the last few days — and was behind AC Milan; they could take advantage of it if they wanted to.

AC Milan had a good shot right from the opening of the game, and they were also keeping good possession of the ball.

Although Haidara's shot came in and hit the goal post, it was some great technique from the youngster. The Italians did not seem to like the tackles that were coming in from the other team. As the first half came to a close, it was still nil-nil.

Nick Summerbee – Al Kass Analyst

AC Milan was taking control of the game in the second half, and was trying to keep possession of the ball.

Olzer had a perfect shot in the start of the second half, and it went over the goal post. Hamdi was doing really well for Wydad; he was chasing the ball and working past the defender. I really felt that some of the players had to stop complaining, and get on with the game.

There were a lot of AC Milan players on the ground, but none of the Wydad players were going down with any cramps. Haidara had some really fantastic chances tonight, but he really had to work on his finishing touches.

The Wydad goalkeeper let the ball slip by beneath him, and Corti took that opening to bring a goal for AC Milan. Although Wydad did not bring a goal, I think they did really well in this game.

FOOTBALL DREAMS AND REAL EASE INTO KNOCKOUT STAGE

Aspire Football Dreams and Real Madrid fought out a gritty 1-1 draw in Match 8 of Al Kass 2018. With qualification virtually assured for both sides, the game nonetheless presented a valuable opportunity to assess progress against accomplished opposition.

Real had announced themselves as tournament favourites with an imperious 6-2 victory over Fenerbahce in their opening game. AFD, meanwhile, had never looked anything other than comfortable in a routine 2-0 win against the Turkish side. This game therefore promised an altogether tougher examination of each side's true credentials.

AFD boss Serine Dia had made only one change to his previous starting line-up, with Momodou Jallow slotting in at the back in place of Djakaria Barro.

In contrast, perhaps mindful of the demanding Al Kass schedule, Madrid head coach Manuel Fernandez had rung the changes for this match. Only two players – centre backs Sergio Santos and Javier Domniguez – survived from the previous first 11.

Pacheco had cause to be thankful for retaining his centre backs when, on 23 minutes, his side took the lead. Eneko Gines swung a free kick in from the left, which was only partially cleared. Domniguez was first on the scene, blasting a bouncing ball into the roof of the net from eight yards out.

In a first half where very few chances arose, the goal provided a precious lead for Los Blancos, which they defended resolutely. Content to sit back and absorb pressure, Real sought to counterattack quickly when the opportunity arose.

For their part, Aspire continued to play their positive brand of possession football, seeking to prise open the well-drilled Real backline.

Domniguez' goal aside, there was nothing to choose between the two sides as the first half drew to a close. And, on the stroke of half time, AFD were level.

Christian Otabil advanced into the area down the inside left channel, deftly evading a last-ditch challenge before slotting past Real keeper Toni Ribera. It was the striker's second goal of the tournament, and set the stage for the second 45 minutes.

Barring a late and one-sided avalanche of goals, both teams were already assured of progressing to the knockout stage, thanks to Fenerbahce's defeat in both games.

Yet the game remained hugely competitive in the early stages of the second half, with every loose ball chased down, and intricate approach play a feature of both sides' styles.

Approaching the hour mark, Aspire had the ball in the net, only for an offside flag to intervene. Soon after, Madrid made two changes, and minutes later Barro replaced goalscorer Otabil for AFD.

With mutual qualification assured, the pace inevitably dropped away in the game's final quarter, with both sides seemingly content to treat the remainder of the game as a competitive training exercise. A series of half-chances came and went but, on each occasion, defence came out on top. Santos was particularly impressive at the back for Madrid, even embarking on the occasional surge forward that Aspire struggled to contain.

In the knockout phase, few teams will relish being drawn against AFD or Real, and both sides will doubtless be grateful for an opportunity to hone their tactics, as the business end of the tournament awaits.

Aspire Football Dreams were showing some direct approach in the beginning of the first half, and Real Madrid was really good at defending. Both teams were showing some good pressure right from the start.

There was a real good opener for Real Madrid 16 minutes into the clock, and they just had to make use of the opportunity. It was Fores Mendoza, who came in with a free header, but it was cleared off by the goalkeeper. Real Madrid was slowly getting into the game and taking a hold of the match. The pressure eventually paid off, when Santos came in with that glorious goal; you could really feel it coming.

Aspire Football Dreams were back in the game, minutes before the second half came to a finish. It was a fabulous finish by Otabil, after Santos went down on the ground.

Nick Summerbee – Al Kass Analyst

Santos had a good control of the ball tonight, and he worked really hard for that first goal. What I really like about Real Madrid is, when they get a goal, they open up and keep up the pressure.

Aspire Football Dreams was playing into midfield, but they were not pushing forward at all in the first half; they really needed to step it up. Aspire Football Dreams had a good chance of bringing a goal with a free kick in the second half, but it came off target. There was a good tackle on midfield by Real Madrid, but it was looking too tight to really build up anything.

The Spanish were putting on good pressure; they just had to get in there and step it up a little bit.

The third game of Day 3 at Al Kass 2018 was also the most eagerly anticipated. Paris Saint-Germain – ever-present at all seven editions of the tournament, and victors in 2015 – matched up against Al Kass debutants Tottenham Hotspur.

Ultimately, PSG secured a convincing 4-2 victory against a Spurs team who were clearly feeling the aftereffects of last night's exertions. The English youngsters were extremely unfortunate to have been on the wrong end of a 3-2 scoreline the previous evening against Kashiwa Reysol, having exhibited massive potential in a game they should have won. Tonight, they had no option but to win if they were to continue their Al Kass journey.

And, to their credit, Tottenham immediately showed that they were fully focussed on the task in hand, and took the lead in remarkable fashion with the game less than two minutes old.

There seemed little danger when Paris keeper Trey Vimalin surveyed the field with the ball at his feet, but his diagonal pass to Curtis Fiawoo on the edge of the area put the defender in trouble. In desperation, he attempted to return the ball to Vimalin, only for rapid striker Enock Asante to cut out the weak pass and finish into an empty net.

Moments later, Asante almost doubled the advantage in similar circumstances, capitalising on Vimalin's suspect footwork to tackle the keeper, only for the ball to roll wide of the left-hand post.

PSG were certainly not intimidated by these early setbacks, and almost drew level when Tanguy Coulibaly pounced on a rebound but somehow fired wide, with the goal at his mercy.

Within seconds, however, the equaliser arrived when Spurs failed to clear their lines and Adil Aouchiche drilled home from 12 yards into the top right corner.

Midfielder Edmond Maghoma had controlled the game against Kashiwa, but initially struggled to impose himself on proceedings, with fatigue or tactical tweaks possible factors as he sat deep. Instead, Tottenham were reliant on Jneil Bennett as their primary attacking outlet, with his pacey runs down the left asking questions of the PSG backline.

For the Parisians, Providence was a constant threat on the right, and the tricky winger was the architect of PSG's second, on 28 minutes, when he ended a characteristic burst down the flank with an accurate low cross that Alexandre Fressange struck first time, the ball squeezing under luckless Spurs keeper Oluwaferanmi Oluwayemi.

Tottenham were desperate to find a way back into the game, and the tournament, but it was slow going against a PSG side who grew increasingly commanding as the second half unfolded, with Coulibaly causing constant problems for Spurs right back Maximus Tainio.

And then, out of nowhere, Tottenham levelled. Dilan Markanday, advancing into the area, was first to a high diagonal ball from deep on the right, and his touch found Asante, who made no mistake from 10 yards.

Parity lasted only two minutes, however, as Fressange fired his second of the game from close range to make it 3-2 to PSG.

On 65 minutes, Spurs head coach Scott Parker made a positive change, replacing midfielder Chukwunonso Madueke with forward Maurizio Pochettino Grippaldi, who instantly took up an advanced position on the right wing. With PSG winning the battle in the centre of the pitch, the tactical switch was perhaps an attempt to exploit the wide areas.

However, Paris appeared more than capable of repelling Spurs' attacks, defending in numbers and breaking at speed wherever possible. This approach reaped further reward on 76 minutes when Loic Soh met a low cross six yards out and made no mistake with a first-time effort.

Facing a 4-2 deficit, all seemed lost for Spurs, and Parker responded by withdrawing goalscorer Asante on 78 minutes for Max Robson, perhaps with a view to giving competitive match experience to the young midfielder. A couple of minutes later, Marqes Muir also made his tournament bow, replacing Luis Binks in the Spurs backline.

The changes did nothing to alter the course of the game, as PSG ultimately ran out worthy winners against a Tottenham side who had promised much but eventually ran out of steam.

It was a cool evening in Doha tonight, with perfect conditions to play football. It was a wonderful start of the game, when Tottenham brought a goal in less than two minutes on a mistake by Curtis.

Paris Saint-Germain just had to regroup, and put the disappointment behind them, and that is exactly what they did. PSG was starting to pull the strings out, and Aouchiche took the chance to bring an opening goal for his team.

It was too soon, and the goalkeeper just let the ball go through straight into the box. It was ten minutes to go for halftime, and PSG was leading 2-1.

Chris Makins – Al Kass Analyst

It was just not happening for Tottenham, 50 minutes into the game. In the second half, they were pushing forward, and looking for opportunities to bring an equalizing goal.

It was a brilliant second goal by Asante, 58 minutes into the game, which set Tottenham back into the game. There was another goal from PSG, with just half an hour to go on the clock, and things were starting to look a bit more intense.

As we approached the final quarter of the match, there was a brilliant fourth goal from Paris Saint-Germain; it was a build up play by Providence, and a shot into the box by Loic Soh. What a brilliant goal it was!
